Winter Ale Wanders Back 2020 A.K.A. Magicale mystery tour!

Earlier than last year but March always seemed just a bit on the late side for the event even if Winter was still with us. However it appears to be now a tradition that as North Sea Ale goes to press we won't have much idea what beers will be available. Active Hostelties 2020 are

The Queen Vic

provisional options are Burnside Snowed In
Swannay Orkney
Porter
Fierce Killer
Crannochan

The Globe
Under the Hammer
The Grill
The Stag
Krakatoa

As information comes in we shall update the CAMRA web-site regarding available beers likewise if there are additional participants. This year the event is scheduled to run slightly longer as I discovered on my after event visit to most of the hostelties that all the beers hit their prime the day after it was over. However the problem with patience is there is no guarantee that the beer will be there on day 5!

JUDGING THE CHAMPION BEER OF BRITAIN

In the previous issue of North Sea Ale we listed the winners of the 2019 Champion Beer of Britain (CBOB) competition. But how did those beers get into the competition in the first place and how are the winners selected? Hopefully this piece will give you some idea of what goes on.

The beer judging cycle unfortunately takes quite some time. A necessity given there are now more than 10,000 different beers brewed in the UK. The first stage is to look for nominations from all CAMRA members. Typically this would take place in November and simply involves online voting. The beers themselves are subdivided into categories according to the beer style. These styles are currently under review but for the purposes of the 2019 competitions they were: bitters, best bitters, milds, golden ales, speciality, strong bitters, old ales and strong milds, porters, stouts and barley wines/strong old ales.

Some beers are not eligible for competition due to availability. Either they are only produced for a few weeks a year so a good example would be a Christmas special, or they are only available in a very limited number of outlets so by example a brew pub with only one or two other outlets would have to be excluded.

Once the nominations are compiled they are supplemented with those beers which have consistently scored highly via the tasting cards received from CAMRA trained tasters reporting back to tasting panels throughout the year along with winners of beer of the festival competitions from the 200 plus local beer festivals held throughout the year right across the UK.

The next stage is “regional”. In our case that means Scotland and Northern Ireland. For each beer style category there is a blind judging, usually held prior to a local beer festival. This is where a panel of some six to eight judges are required to score somewhere between 7-9 beers of a particular style for their appearance, aroma, taste and aftertaste. Over the years that we held a beer festival in Aberdeen we hosted pretty much every beer style competition. The winners of these regional heats get to call themselves Champion Bitter/Mild etc. of Scotland and go forward to the next stage. In addition they also get entry to the Champion Beer of Scotland competition which is of course a mixed style competition.

The final stages of the search for the beer champions are held at the Great British Beer Festival (GBBF), which takes place at Olympia in London each August.

The whole judging cycle starts at some ungodly hour on the first public opening day, a Tuesday. In a very similar way to the regional heats panels of judges are assembled and required to judge beers of a single category. However this time the beers are the winners from each of the regional competitions. There are multiple panels all simultaneously judging to cover all the beer categories. Because some categories have a lot more beers e.g. bitters they rate two tables of judges as it would be too much to try and judge 14-18 beers in one sitting. Because of seasonal availability the old ales/strong milds, porters, stouts and barley wines/strong old ales have their first round judging at the Great British Winter Beer Festival held typically in February.

At this stage judging panels are typically made up of trained CAMRA tasters, tasting panel chairmen, brewers (but not if they have a beer in competition in their assigned beer style category), beer writers, journalists and occasionally invited beer judges from CAMRA's partner organisations (ECBU) from overseas.

Following the first round the winners go forward to a second round which has panels judging mixed beer styles. This is where the winners from the "winter" categories take their place in the competition. Fresh judges are used for this stage as the taste buds can only do so much in a day.

The final round, again with yet another set of fresh judges, sees the highest ranking beers from the previous set of judging set of panels vie for the honour of being crowned Champion Beer of Britain with the results announced at around 3pm during the trade session on the opening day of GBBF.

ALE TRAIL

A mixed bag of memories & new experiences

The heavy downpour helped to slow my approach to the day which would involve a variation of nostalgia and new experiences. However arrival at the Globe showed a break in the rain (the Fierce bar having been ticked off earlier in the week when I collected my ticket) A swift half and the discovery that 3 of the other participants had travelled from afar to take part and were staying the weekend. My first charabanc was due so I walked back down to Golden Square's new bus stop to climb aboard. Originally I had intended to skip past the Dutch Mill but as I realised that this was a first and the Dutch Mill was the first Aberdeen bar to appear in the GBG perhaps a visit was indeed in order. The usual regulars Deuchars and Bitter& Twisted were available plus an Overworks beer (having experienced the £4.60 for a half pint previously for an over work beer) I stuck with the usual. Then onto the Smiddy(Fourmile) at Kingswells where I tried the Torr from Beerstorry which definitely ranks alongside Schiehallion as a quality lager. On my last visit here the Deuchars was being served from the restaurant and the bar was empty so I felt I should drink in the restaurant as I've never enjoyed much supping in an empty bar. So to see a reasonable level of activity was heartening. The next stop was to involve a certain level of trepidation. The Bieldside Inn had been frequented often in the past but the past was around 20+ years ago and could well be another country! The original building doesn't look much different from the outside but inside had been completely gutted leaving no remnant of the original bar. If I'd never been in the previous incarnation I'd have been quite impressed with the interior but there was a tendency to feel that (even though there was a bar area) there wasn't much bar feel left in what is now a restaurant with prices and beer quality to match. Onto what was likely to be the highlight of the trail, the Newton Arms at Newtonhill. Happy Chappy and Atlantic Drift were happily quaffed as two pints of cold fizzy beers in succession had undoubtedly disrupted my Castro-intestinal tract. The numbers were steadily building from a slow start as the weather cleared up; perhaps the evening would indeed be busy.

Onto an outlet I was pretty sure that I'd never been to before and the Neuk at Portlethen was indeed a new experience an excellent rural bar that was sporting a bank of 3 beers from Bodachra and a pint of Armadillo but on reflection I still prefer the Denvie IPA. I'm not sure if all 3 beers will be on after the Ale trail but it might be worth a visit to see if one has been kept on.

Sadly I decided, as the bus pulled up across the bridge from the Cove Bay Hotel, that I would stay on the bus having had a sufficiency of ale to the extent that I could see myself hopping into the shop nearby to purchase nicotine for the first time in months whilst waiting for the next bus to town. I shall attempt a visit before the next Ale-trail which will resume in April 2020? Whether I'll be on the bus or not will depend on additional outlets of interest being available. Hopefully the organisers will provide a full itinerary in the advertising section of this issue.

PUBLICAN PROFILE– PAUL BEATTIE—GLOBE INN

Where were you born and brought up and when?

Born in Aberdeen in 1979, Spent 4 years living in Cyprus from age 5-9, Lived in Norwich for a year before returning to Aberdeen.

A brief resume of your education (Schools. University. College. Evening Classes etc.)

Due to moving around a lot, I went to various primary schools before ending up at Cults Academy

Brief resume of career before joining the Licensed Trade

Been in the licensed trade since leaving school in 1996

History of your career in the Licensed Trade

Started career in Glasgow at The Copthorne Hotel doing Trainee Management which I went on to complete at The Marcliffe at Pitfodels, Aberdeen.

In 2000, I joined the family business at Roo's Leap, Montrose. In 2002 took over and ran The Waterwheel Inn, Milltimber. 2004 opened Roo's Leap Aviemore where I lived and continued to work within the family business until 2018 when my wife and I took over The Globe Inn.

What is your favourite food?

I enjoy lots of different cuisines but you can't beat a good family roast dinner.

What is your favourite drink (beer, preferably, but any others)

Favourite drink is Lager normally Tennents or Budweiser, but since running The Globe, I find myself drinking a lot more Ales.

Hobbies outwith the pub trade

Golfing, fishing, socialising in the pub with friends and travelling abroad with the tartan army are hobbies of mine but for me its all about spending as much time as possible with my wife and boys.

Tastes in music

I like all Genres of music just depends on the mood. Went to lots of festivals in my younger years but struggle to find time these days.

Favourite films?

Definitely enjoy watching films but difficult to pick favourites, Crime films are a favourite of mine, a few of my favourites:- Oceans 11, The silence of the Lambs, Pulp fiction, Scarface, The Italian Job and The Town.

Favourite TV programmes?

Between the wife and kids watching tv programs I don't get much time for my own programs but prefer to watch films anyway.

Marital Status/Children/Dogs etc.

Married have 2 boys age 1&2 and another baby boy due in May so no time for any pets.

Do you think that Real Ale is on the up or is it suffering from the 'craft beer' revolution?

Craft beer has definitely exploded however I do find that people are now more receptive to trying something new and our Ale sales are definitely growing.

WINDSWEPT WINNER

WINDSWEPT WEIZEN IS OVERALL CAMRA CHAMPION BEER OF SCOTLAND

Nigel Tiddy, Managing Director of Windswept Brewery, Lossiemouth was delighted to receive The Dan Kane Memorial Quaich, along with certificates for Champion Strong Bitter (American Pale Ale) and Champion Old Ale (Wolf). In addition, Wolf became the Society of Independent Brewers Association Champion Beer of Scotland in Cask.

Nigel receives the trophy from Aberdeen Camra Brewery Liaison Colin Youngson

This prestigious award is named after one of CAMRA's greatest Scottish activists who was lost to leukaemia in 1992, aged just 45. It was first presented in 1996 and the list of winners permits insight into the development of Scottish real ale over 24 years.

Caledonian won with 80 shillings ale in 1996 and 1997, followed by Deuchar's IPA in 1998. Harviestoun Bitter & Twisted won twice (1999 and 2002). Orkney ceeded with Dark Island in 2000 and 2003; and Raven Ale in 2009. Inveralmond won in 2001 with Ossian's Ale. Cairngorm triumphed with Trade Winds (2004) and Black Gold (2005 and 2015). Kelburn won twice, with Cart Blanche (2006) and Dark Moor (2014). Isle of Skye's Cuillin Beast was champion in 2011; followed by Fyne Ales Jarl (2013); Tryst Raj IPA (2016); and Loch Lomond Silkie Stout (2017).

Excellent brewers should be remembered: Russell Sharp (Caledonian); Ken Brooker (Harviestoun); Roger White and Andrew Fulton (Orkney); Fergus Clark (Inveralmond); Sean Tomlinson (Cairngorm); Derek Moore (Kelburn); Pam and Angus McRuary (Isle of Skye); Wil Wood (Fyne Ales); John McGarva (Tryst); Fiona and Euan Maceachern (Loch Lomond). Rob Hill has brewed an amazing five different Scottish Champion beers: four with Highland Brewing – Dark Munro (2007), Scapa Special (2008), Orkney Blast (2010) and Orkney Best (2012); and one with Swannay – Orkney IPA (2018).

Considering that Orkney, Highland Brewing, and Windswept all feature in Aberdeen and the Northern Isles, our branch has won the title nine times!

Now it is time to salute Windswept Brewing Company (Al Read, Nigel Tiddy and Stuart Evans) who produce such a marvellous range of quality real ales and bottle-conditioned beers. They are worthy winners of this year's Campaign for Real Ale Champion Beer of Scotland.

Redgarth 30th Celebration

The 10th of January 2020 was a landmark in the life of one of the best Real Ale pubs in Scotland, if not in Britain, the Redgarth in Oldmeldrum. Since Stuart Singer took it over, it has been a regular entry in CAMRA's Good Beer Guide for 29 successive years starting with the 1992 edition and there is no reason to doubt that it will make the grade for the 2021 edition due to be published in September 2020. Previously under Stuart's ownership, the Boars Head at Kinmuck featured for 3 years from 1988 to 1990.

The event was attended by George Howie, Richard and Donna Jones, Neil and Ian Andrew of the local CAMRA branch. All attendees at the celebration were met by a smiling Stuart and handed a voucher for their first pint and a special edition celebration pen. Beers available were Swannay Island Hopping, Scapa Special and Kelburn Jaguar. Unfortunately the Fyne Ales Jarl was not up to Stuart's demanding standard and was not put on sale - that is why the pub makes the GBG on a regular basis, always superb condition beer and the Redgarth does not sell any beer above around 4.5% abv.

Several local musicians played throughout the evening, a superb buffet was supplied and the ale pumps were being pulled constantly. So much so that by the time our party departed for the last bus back to Aberdeen, there was only the Jaguar remaining on sale. A TV in the back room showed a variety of photos from over the years with Stuart giving a personal talk about the pub (video available using the following link <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4eeCTwXoL0k&t=186s>).
